1. This assortantian is in confirmation of oral edvice previously given that

Even that

Considered dependents either for travel purposes or for establishing the quantum of a separation allowance. The reason for our opinion is one of definition.

2. AFR 30-3, paragraph 2.b., defines five categories of individuals closely related to the exployee who may be considered dependents. Grandchildren fall in come of these categories and, hence, must by negative implication not be regarded as dependents. This, of course, is irrespective of the factual situation which here obtains, since, as you point out the factual situation which here obtains, since, as you point out the factual situation for income tax purposes and providing their total support. Their qualification as dependents for tax purposes, of course, cannot be considered qualification for travel purposes where the standards are prescribed by wholly different statute and regulation. This is not to be construed as meaning that the Agency could not legally authorize grandchildren to be regarded as dependents for travel purposes; it is simply to state that under present regulations they are excluded.

3. Turning to the matter of the separation ellowance, Section 261.1 of the Standardised Regulations (Covernment Civilians, Foreign Areas) defines the family of an individual who qualifies for receipt of a separation allowance as including only a wife and unmarried minor children. Children say be either adopted or step-children. Here, again, by inescapable regulive implication grandchildren cassot be considered. This limitation upon the authorization of a separation allowance is founded in a regulation having Government-wide application and is, hence, not subject to alteration by this agency in an individual situation.
